Ada County Campus Humor in American Culture "Good satire goes beyond the specific point it's trying to make and teaches you how to think critically. Even after your favorite cartoonist retires or [Stephen] Colbert wraps it up, you're not left believing everything they're telling you." -Aaron McGruder, creator of "The Boondocks" In this course we will examine satirical works such as The Daily Show, The Onion, and South Park to think critically about American culture and to explore important moments and transitions in our history as well as in current events. We will analyze the impact of these works on us as media consumers-how do they change the way we think about our culture and events? Why do so many Americans get their news from humorists instead of or in addition to traditional news outlets? Why does an Onion article prompt us to think about an issue in a way that a New York Times article doesn't? To answer these questions, we will examine satire as a literary genre and art form in political cartoons, film, journalism, television, and social media. Digital Citizenship The focus of this course will be a fun and provocative look at how technology is changing us inside and outside of the classroom. Networks are resources that provide you with valuable information. Networking is not just about computers, cell phones, Facebook, and Twitter. Networking is also working together on assignments and finding help through services you might not have considered yet. So what are the advantages and disadvantages of all these networks around you? In this course we will address networking as a concept, not just as a technical option. You will learn how to use computer related networks such as email, cloud networking, and other non-computer related networks, that are available to you as a student, when attending CWI. Students will learn how to take responsibility of learning in both the traditional and the classroom with more technology.

Rated (R)eality: Exploring Controversy in Media and Society "This is your last chance. After this, there is no turning back. You take the blue pill - the story ends, you wake up in your bed and believe whatever you want to believe. You take the red pill - you stay in Wonderland and I show you how deep the rabbit-hole goes." - Morpheus, The Matrix For some, the experience of becoming a college student can be very different then what they had expected or imagined. We all hold ideas and assumptions about the way things "really are," and about how the world works. When those ideas and assumptions are challenged, it can be both uncomfortable and liberating. This course introduces students to the college experience and to ways of thinking and learning that can be both challenging and rewarding. By sociologically exploring interesting (and sometimes controversial) topics that are relevant in contemporary media and society, students will develop strategies for success in college as well as gain new and important insights into the ways in which they are shaped by - and connected to - the community, society and culture in which they live. Welcome to The X-Men: Diversity & Discrimination as Explored by Marvel's "Mutants" One of the most popular imprints in the history of Marvel Comics, the "X-Men" serve to allow readers the ability to explore the complicated nature of diversity and discrimination in modern society. As intolerance based on race, religion, gender, sexuality and a variety of other factors permeate our news and social media, the "X-Men" present a popular cultural lens to consider the consequences of an "us vs. them" battle. This course will consider the role that diversity plays in our modern world, using the X-Men as a discussion focus as we explore common themes present in global diversity. Discussions will move through the history of the imprint, exploring themes of race, gender, and sexuality as modeled through the lens of the X-Men. The course will culminate with an assignment in which students will explore diversity and discrimination through the viewpoint of individual characters in the X-Men mythos.

Humor in American Culture "Good satire goes beyond the specific point it's trying to make and teaches you how to think critically. Even after your favorite cartoonist retires or [Stephen] Colbert wraps it up, you're not left believing everything they're telling you." -Aaron McGruder, creator of "The Boondocks" In this course we will examine satirical works such as The Daily Show, The Onion, and South Park to think critically about American culture and to explore important moments and transitions in our history as well as in current events. We will analyze the impact of these works on us as media consumers-how do they change the way we think about our culture and events? Why do so many Americans get their news from humorists instead of or in addition to traditional news outlets? Why does an Onion article prompt us to think about an issue in a way that a New York Times article doesn't? To answer these questions, we will examine satire as a literary genre and art form in political cartoons, film, journalism, television, and social media.

True Lies: Short Fiction about Real Life According to Stephen King, "Fiction is a lie, and good fiction is the truth inside the lie." In this course, we will examine stories that walk the line between fiction and nonfiction and how contemporary writers illuminate real-life difficulties. We will read Tim O'Brien on war, Lorrie Moore on cancer, Amy Hempel on her worst secret, and Sherman Alexie on leaving home. We will explore the kinds of truths that might lend themselves to fiction and discuss how fiction helps us to navigate our lives and our world. Students will have the opportunity to experiment with turning their own life into fiction.

YOLO: Existing in the Modern World You only live once is a popular tag line of our modern society. While some say it just started with a rap song, Soren Kierkegaard, a dusty old Dane who lived more than 150 years ago, had some ideas that look remarkably like the phrase we use today. Through a study of some of his main themes of philosophy such as 'passionate inwardness', 'subjectivity', 'the individual', and 'the leap of faith', we will go on a cultural treasure hunt to see these very popular themes reflected in the movies, music, and short stories that are all around us. By the time you have finished this course, you will be able to decide for yourself if Kierkegaard is indeed the first one with the hashtag YOLO. NOTE: Online sections of CWID are designed for students in fully online degrees. Students who are taking any face-to-face classes should select a face-to-face or hybrid section of CWID.

Ada County Campus Idaho's Wild West: Idaho Writers and Western Myths and Stereotypes The American West conjures images of cowboys and outlaws, gold mines and uncharted wilderness, Wild West shows and Hollywood, vast, empty spaces and suburban sprawl. It has long been viewed as rugged territory where the hearty, the visionary, and the brave can claim fortune, freedom, and fame. It is a land as much myth as reality, full of contradiction and complexity. Literature has played a role in creating, perpetuating, and debunking these myths. This course will introduce you to various Idaho writers and their writings. Through their fiction and non-fiction-much of it set in the state of Idaho, we will explore the ever-changing West and analyze its many meanings. How do these writers and stories envision the West, and how do these visions fit with your own, as a College of Western Idaho student?	Pintail Center	1320			davenicholas@cwidaho.cc	2:30 PM	3:45 PM

Digital Citizenship The focus of this course will be a fun and provocative look at how technology is changing us inside and outside of the classroom. Networks are resources that provide you with valuable information. Networking is not just about computers, cell phones, Facebook, and Twitter. Networking is also working together on assignments and finding help through services you might not have considered yet. So what are the advantages and disadvantages of all these networks around you? In this course we will address networking as a concept, not just as a technical option. You will learn how to use computer related networks such as email, cloud networking, and other non-computer related networks, that are available to you as a student, when attending CWI. Students will learn how to take responsibility of learning in both the traditional and the classroom with more technology.	$40.00

What Are the Chances? Newspapers love to splash big headlines about death by shark, but did you realize that you are more likely to be killed by a statistician than by a shark? This topic will take a light-hearted but rigorous approach to probability, giving you the opportunity to exercise some fairly simple mathematical operations while thinking about some fairly complex ideas. The theme will be approached from a variety of disciplines, looking not only at the mathematical concepts of probability, but also at its historical and philosophical underpinnings. Don't be afraid to sign up just because your math background is shaky! All calculations will be done with calculators, and nothing is more complex than simple addition, subtraction, multiplication, and division. Heroes and Villains What does it mean to be a hero or a villain? We will consider both famous and obscure examples of unique individuals and their circumstances. Heroic stories can inspire us to be persistent and resilient in the face of trials, whereas stories of villains can serve as a warning and strengthen our resolve. What factors lead to an individual's success or failure? Various case studies will be examined relating to topics such as culture, opportunity, personality, genius, persistence, and achievement. This is an interdisciplinary course, primarily drawing from sociology, psychology, and history. You will be able to develop practical tools to define your own personal and professional goals and determine how you can overcome obstacles to achieve your goals.
